Twelve year old Toby MacAnully is a normal young American boy growing up in a small town. He is bold, enthusiastic and he questions everything. He sees life from a very unique point of view, envisioning himself a storyteller much like his grandfather, who inspired him with vivid tales of witches, cats and scary creatures that walk alone in the darkness. While his Christian upbringing admonishes him for believing in ghosts and tales of witches, he cannot put aside what his eyes have seen and what his ears have heard. Stories can be fascinating and exciting! But what if they were also true? And at what point do fairy tales, myths and legends become real? Could Toby's grandfather's stories be true? And how will he be able to tell fact from fiction in this very real and fascinating coming of age story as Toby suddenly discovers the astonishing truths about his world? Truths that will change his life forever! The Author - Tony Nalley, lives in Bardstown Kentucky. The stories contained within these pages are based upon real events taken from his own life, and from the history and stories of his hometown. Tony recorded his grandfather's tales when he was approximately nine years old on an old cassette tape recorder, and he transcribed them almost 40 years later in their entirety onto the pages of this book. Read them. Research them. Believe.
