Dear Friend, Kedu?

Have you notice how the Igbo Language is fast deteriorating in our schools, markets, public places, business sectors, and even in the homes, as if no one speaks the language anymore?

This is indeed sad, knowing fully well that a people's language is their major identity. But let me ask you: Do you think it is necessary for children born abroad to learn and speak their parents' original language?

You see, many Igbo children, especially those living abroad, or more specifically; children whose parents are of the Igbo stock, cannot speak the language.

Why is this? Why are many Nigerian parents with dual-nationality usually reluctant to teach their children our languages? They forget the importance of teaching their children our native languages in a foreign land.

When discussing the problem, I found that majority of the people were of the view that "they've failed their children due to plain laziness, 'as a result, they feel guilty and shame".

Some said "they could not find a simple and affordable quality Igbo books to learn with and saw no use in teaching their children Igbo. With whom would the children speak the language? Most of their playmates do not speak Igbo".

You'll be learning the deepest Igbo secrets about how to learn and speak Igbo fast with ease! Take a look at the Volume I: Table of contents, a sample of what you'll discover and learn from Teach Yourself Igbo:
